TQ 75 NE BOXLEY BOARLEY LANE (east side) Sandling

5/57 St. Andrew's Chapel 20.10.52

G.V. II*

Chapel, with priests "lodging", attached to Boxley Abbey converted to dwelling late C16 or early C17, now house. Probably late C15, with late C16 or early C17 wing. Ragstone with plain tile roof. Wing timber framed with rendered and bricked walls. Chapel, with south aisle running from west end to adjoin a 2-storey "lodging" approx. twice the width of the aisle, joined and running parallel to the east end of the chapel on the south side. Single timber- framed bay same width as "lodging" added to east of it, beyond east end of chapel. Chapel: on moulded stone plinth which descends vertically to ground with broach stops on either side of doors. Aisle roofed as lean-to, with C19 studded half gable at east end, abutting "lodgings". Central brick stack with corniced top. West elevation has large rectangular window with plain chamfered surround containing C19 4-light ovolo-moulded wood mullion window. Below, one small square window either side of door. South elevation has rectangular window with hollow-chamfered stone jambs and cill and head formed from wall-plate of half-gable, continuing 2-light ovolo moulded wood mullion window. East window blocked with C19 red bricks, with C19 3-light ovolo-moulded wood mullion window in chamfered brick architrave in upper section and 2-light wood casement with segmental brick head below. North elevation has very small rectangular single light towards east end with plain chamfered stone surround morticed for iron bars. 3 large putlock holes in line at first floor level. 3 external doors; one to east of centre in north and south elevations with 2-centred arched heads and hollow chamfered stone jambs on moulded bases, and one in centre of west elevation, wider with plain chamfered stone jambs and head. "Lodgings": integral with chapel, plinth of which continues round it. First floor on south elevation jettied out a few inches on concave stone lintel. Roofed parallel to chapel, with bridging ridge at right-angles between them. 3 small rectangular stone windows with chamfered surrounds, one towards apex of west gable, one with iron bars towards south end of west gable on first floor and one in the centre of the first floor to the south elevation. No external door. Wing: 2 storeys on plinth, roof hipped to north and south. Projecting red brick stack on east elevation. South elevation underbuilt in stone with 3-light square-headed Perpendicular stone window with hollow chamfers, hollow spandrels and plain hood mould, said to have come from west end of chapel. No external door. Interior: Door between chapel and "lodging" at east end of south wall of chapel, narrow, with arched stone architrave with hollow chamfer and broach stops. Hagioscope in wall to west of it. Chapel roof ceiled at collar level; rafters of uniform scantling with collars, sous-laces, ashlar pieces and moulded cornice: Moulded tie-beam to east of centre.

5/48 Boxley Abbey House 20.10.52

G.V. II*

Part of Boxley Abbey (Cistercian), incorporating part of the west range and possibly part of Abbot's house; once a large L-plan house of which the present house is a fragment. Abbey founded in 1146 by William of Ypres, Earl of Kent and dissolved in 1538; some C16 work; house built in early C18. Stone core with red brick front and plain tile roof. 3 storeys. North elevation (entrance front): no plinth, but about 1' at base of ground floor is in coursed galletted stone, with red brick in Flemish bond above. Platt band above ground-floor and first-floor windows, and very deep dentilled and moulded wood eaves cornice. Roof of 4 small ridges parallel to front elevation. Small projecting C19 and C20 end stacks, that to right towards front and that to left towards rear. Shallow brick buttress at right end. Regular 4-window front of recessed glazing-bar sashes with thick glazing bars. 4th window on the first floor at the left end is a tall round-headed stair window with windows above and below it blocked. C19 panelled door under depressed rubbed brick arch in small C19 brick loggia to left. Print of 1801 shows door in place of right ground-floor window with another 2 windows to the right of it, and a wing at right-angles to the front at the left end, along the west range of the Abbey. Left end elevation (east) left half built in stone to eaves level, rest in red brick in header bond with irregular courses of stretchers. Right end elevation (west): ground floor in galletted stone, possibly C16, with brick in Flemish bond above. Bell under semi-circular hood on third gable from front. Rear elevation (south): ground floor in stone, possibly C16. Deep moulded wood eaves cornice. Large C16 coursed and galletted stone stack on plinth, finished at top in brick crow-steps with rectangular, corniced, brick plinth above and 3 diagonally set brick flues. Rear wing at right end of rear elevation: C19. Roughly coursed stone with brick dressings and plain tile roof. 2 storeys with brick end stack, central dormer and 2 first-floor glazing bar sashes. Interior: very thick internal walls on ground floor with 3 possibly original openings, one with 2-centred arched head, moulded jambs and broach stop. Early C18 staircase from ground to second floor. Some C18 panelling and cornices on first floor. First floor doors with eared architraves and fielded panels, second floor doors with fielded panels. East part of house scheduled as Ancient Monument. P.J. Tester, "Excavations at Boxley Abbey", in Archaeologia Cantiana Vol. 88, 1974. Beneath and slightly to the left an arched door-head with chamfered jambs, no voussoirs and base covered by ground. Right end contains a pointed ground-floor window centrally placed between the blocked door and the right gable end. On the first-floor above it and slightly to the left an inserted wood-framed window obscures an original oblong opening. Inserted ground- floor door between pointed window and door to left. Small inserted window under eaves at right end. Interior: Divided into 3 sections corresponding with the changes in window. Narrow central area marked by original stone cross-walls with (probably much later) timber partitions above them between the tie-beams and the apex of the roof. South side of central area, not recessed for a floor and containing the mid-height pointed window, may be stair area. Side walls of east and west sections recessed for floor that in east section lower than that in west. 3 chamfered posts on stone pads, braced to carry floor, 2 with cross-beams intact, remain in centre of ground floor in west section. Stone doors in north end of both cross-walls on ground and first floors, with chamfered jambs and broach stops, and jambs of another in south end of west wall on first floor. Plain ground floor fireplace in north wall of east section served by stack external on first-floor. Roof to east of opposed barn doors rebuilt, probably in the early C19. 5 regularly-spaced trusses including one with tie-beam embedded in east gable. Straight king posts carrying ridge-piece. Each has 2 evenly-spaced parallel tiers of straight braces to principal rafters. Tie- beams also braced to principal rafters, at steeper angle. Principal rafters carry 4 tiers of slightly staggered butt side purlins. Rest of roof has rafters of relatively uniform scantling, scissor-braced, with collars and ashlar pieces, forming 7 cants, 10 tie-beams, 2 of which are clearly replacements and the remainder possibly re-used; 6 morticed for cornice, wall (or pendant) posts, and braces, and 2 unmorticed over original stone cross walls. Progressive rebuilding has taken place: the area between the cast cross wall and the king-post roof may be original, that between the cross walls is differently marked and may be slightly later. The area to the west of the west cross-wall was carefully rebuilt in 2 stages in the C18. The whole presents a remarkably uniform appearance.

5/49 Barn at Boxley Abbey 20.10.52 (formerly listed as Tithe Barn at Abbey Court Farm)

G.V. I

Hospitium to Boxley Abbey (Cistercian). Late C13 or early C14. Ragstone with plain tile roof, 186 feet long. Gable end walls recessed above tie-beam. Each wall has very small irregularly placed rectangular ventilation holes. All original windows are morticed in sides and tops for rectangular bars and have chamfered reveals. Some of the windows and doors are now blocked. West gable has 3 lancet-type pointed windows above, and 3 below the tie-beam, the central one in each case stepped above the lower 2. Small later window punched through coping at left end. South side fenestration changes towards centre of building. Left section has 5 regularly-spaced oblong windows under the eaves. On the ground floor, below the middle 3 and stepped slightly to the left are 3 taller, narrower oblong windows. At the left end, immediately below the cill level of the upper windows is a small inserted window with a wooden frame and below the left original first-floor window are 2 superimposed inserted windows, also in wood frames. One pointed window on ground floor to right of last first-floor window. Central quarter of wall blank save for one pointed window will cill immediately above level of tops of ground floor windows. Right section has 4 regularly spaced narrow oblong windows well below the eaves with similar windows on the ground floor below. Inserted barn doors with wooden architraves below 2 central first-floor windows. East gable: has one pointed window in the centre above the tie-beam and 2 oblong windows, much larger than any others in the building, under the tie-beam towards the centre of the wall, with 2 immediately beneath on the ground floor. North side: fenestration highly irregular. Left section has tall narrow oblong first floor windows well below the eaves, similar to those on the south side; one at the left end opposite the end window in the south wall and 2 much further towards the centre of the building, aligned to the right of the 2 counterparts in the south wall. One similar window on the ground floor below the second first-floor window from the left. On the ground floor, 2 arched doorheads, one to left of the left first-floor window and one beneath the first-floor window at the right end; that to left has stone voussoirs and chamfered stone jambs with broach stops. Slightly projecting rectangular stone stack on first floor, on brick relieving arch between the left first-floor window and the full-height barn doors. Full-height inserted barn doors opposite the doors on the south side. Central quarter blank save for inserted wooden doors on each floor. Right section: inserted wooden doors on each floor to right of those in central quarter, the top door obscuring an original oblong window. Then 2 smaller oblong windows immediately below eaves, opposite those on south side, with a pointed window on the ground floor below that to left and a blocked oblong window below that to right. Large long oblong opening under eaves to right of these with wall-plate as head and with broach stops to chamfered stone jambs and a plain cill; not morticed for iron bars, and possibly a first-floor door.
